ETHEROLOGY: OR THE PHILOSOPHY OF MESNERSM AND PHILOSOPHY: Including a New Philosophy of Siegand of Consciousness, with a Review of the Pretensions of Neurology and Phreno-Magnetism: By J. STANLEY GRIMES, Counselfor at Law, formerly President of the Western Phrenological Society, Professor of Medical Jurisprudence in the Castleton Medical College, and author of A New System of Phrenology. New-York: Saxion & Miles, 205 Broadway. 1845.

MAN is always trying to get charts and directions for the super-sensual element in which he finds imself involuntarily moving. Sometimes, indeed. for long periods, a life of continual activity in supplying bodily wants or warding off bodily dangers will make him inattentive to the circumstances of this other life. Then, in an interval of leisure, he will start to find himself pervaded by the power of this more subtle and searching energy, and will turn his thoughts, with new force, to scrutinize its nature and its promises.

At such times a corps is formed of workmen, furnished with various implements for the work. Some collect facts from which they hope to build up a theory; others propose theories by whose light they hope to detect valuable facts; a large number are engaged in circulating reports of these labors; a larger in attempting to prove them invalid and absurd. These last are of some use by shaking the canker-worms from the trees; all are of use in elu-

Such a course of study has the civilized world been engaged in for some years back with regard to what is called Animal Magnetism. We say the civilized world, because, though a large portion of the learned and intellectual, to say nothing of the thoughtless and the prejudiced, view such researches as folly, yet we believe that those prescient souls, those minds more deeply alive, which are the heart | to magnetize the sufferer. She seemed touched by of this and the parents of the next era, all, more or less, consciously or unconsciously, share the belief in such an agent as is understood by the largest definition of Animal Magnetism; that is, a means by which influence and thought may be communicated from one being to another, independent of the usual organs, and with a completeness and precis- advised also, had no adequate idea then of the exion rarely attained through these.

In speaking thus of Mr. Grimes's book, we can still cordially recommend it to the perusal of our renders. Its statements are full and sincere. The writer has abilities which only need to be used with more thoroughness and a higher aim to guide him to valuable attainments. It appears from notices affixed to his book that he has commanded an unusual share of attention, in a field where he has many competitors, and we think his book would many competitors, and we think his book would win for him the same. It will bestew on those who do not find in it positive instruction, information and suggestion enough to requite a careful perusal. The best criticism on this as on other such works is to associate it as a manual with our own

It will be the best justice to Mr. Grimes after what we have said of our impression as to the tone of his work to publish the following extracts from his own preface :

"When the doctrines of Phreno-Magnetism and Neuro-logy were announced, and were making converts by thou-tands, and multitudes of new organs were daily discovered by these with an overwhelming inundation, I was forced to take up this subject in earnest. About every friend I met saked my

I am aware that I shall be hable to the charge of arrogance; but, at the present time, scarcely any two Phre-nologians nor Mesmerclogists can be found who agree; any one, therefore, who treats upon both these subjects at ice, with the design of producing an harmonious system, ust seem to assume that he is wiser than all others, or t apable of filling the chair of the grand-master of the aternity. personal experience to us powerfully expressive of the nature of this higher agent in the intercourse of minds:

Some years ago the writer went, unexpectedly, into a house where a blind girl, thought at that time to have attained an extraordinary degree of clairvoyance, lay in a trance of somnambulism.—
The writer was not invited there, nor known to the party, but accompanied a gentleman who was.

The Somnambulist was in a very happy state. On her lips was the satisfied smile, and her features expressed the gentle elevation incident to the state. The writer had never seen any one in it, and had formed no image or opinion on the subject. She was agreeably impressed by the Somnambulist, but on listening to the details of her observations on a distant place, thought she had really no vision, but and formed for the details of her observations on a distant place, thought she had really no vision, but a supposed to the details of her observations on a distant place, thought she had really no vision, but a supposed to the details of her observations on a distant place, thought she had really no vision, but a supposed to the details of her observations on a distant place, thought she had really no vision, but a supposed the details of her observations on a distant place, thought she had really no vision, but distant place, thought she had really no vision, but was merely led or impressed by the mind of the person who held her hand. After awhile, the writer was beckened forward, and her hand given to the blind girl. The latter instantly dropped it with an expression of pain, and complained that she should have been brought in contact with a person so sick, and suffering at that moment under violent nervous headach. This really was the case, but no one present could have een aware of it. After a while, the Somnambulist seemed penitent and troubled. She asked again for the liand she had rejected, and, while holding it, attempted to magnetize the sufferer. She seemed touched by profound pity, spoke most intelligently of the discount of health and its causes and gave advice. Austin; Winnie et al. vs. Milbanks; Paiga ads. GREATREMENTS.

The question is no longer asked, "Can Asthma be cured?"
It has been satisfactorily settled within the last two months that Folger's Clossonian multiproduce a care quicker than any other remedy in the world, and references can be given to persons in and out of the city, who have reprinced its wonderful virtues, who had tried for years all other remedies in vain.

Mr. WILSON, a brick-layer, residing at Hoboken, N. J. had tried every remedy which he could hear of for the relief of Asthma, and had spent more than one hundred deciments relating to the books, trial balances, belief of Asthma, and had spent more than one hundred deciments in endeavoring to procure help, but in vain. Hecommenced using the Oosaonian, January 21st. The first dose he took gave him relief, and two days afterward his wife called to say that the small quantity of this remedy which he had taken had done him more good than any and all the medicine he had ever used in his life.

Mrs-Bell, the wife of Robert P. Bell of Morrisiow.

M. J. who was severely afflicted with Asthma, was given up by her physicians. She was removed to the sea board in the hope of pallisting her distressing symptoms, but with no benefit. One bottle of the Glosaonian so far releved her that she was able to get up from her bed and life the course of Double Entry Book-Receine Simultant and less hear of Double Entry Book-Receine Simultant at the rooms and and returning. leans, establishes their fire proof qualities beyond all doubt:

"The undersigned have this day witnessed the trial of one of likeh's improved patent Salamander Safes in the farmace of the Sea Rich.

"The Safe was placed in the farmace at 10 minutes after it o'clock A. M. and remained there three hours, constantly exposed to the most intense heat that could be created by the use of pitchpine and cottonwood. It was then taken to the store of Mr. Rich's agent in this city and opened, when they found that the contents were neither hurned nor scorched, and that the wood-work hore no appearance of having been exposed to fire.

"The undersigned are convinced that this Safe was subjected to greater hear than could possibly exist at the burning of any building in this city, however combastible its contents; and they therefore have no hesitation in saying that Rich's Safes are eminently secure against the risk of fire, under any circumstances whatever.
